

ABSTRACT

A connection control module of a switching node in a telecommunications network, and adapted to communicate to a service control module of said switching node is further adapted to communicate to at least one other connection control module of said switching node. This approach enables to establish connections at the physical level by linking half-call connections at this level.